Roscon in his work on Criminal Evidence says :- "In considering the question of milice where death has ensued after provocation given by the deceased in assaultjug the prisoner, or upon other provocation, 'especial attention is to be paid to the nature of the weapon with which death was inflicted If it was one likely to produce that result as used by the prisoner he will be presumed to have used it with the intention of killing, of the Hakluyt Society." This issue was never distinctly placed before the jury in the case we are now considering the weapon was not even handed to them for their personal examination. It is not by any means a pleasant task to assail the legal utterances of such an able and careful judge fully with those of English manufacture, if pro as Mr. Snowden, nor to question the verdict of a jury, but in the interests of the public we feel bound to say that the trial of Thursday is, in several important aspects open to grave objection. As we have said, the usue raised by the nature of the weapon was not placed before the jury, but has the following paragraph illustrative of Chithere can be little doubt that; it was upon this issue that two of the jurous felt it their duty to find the prisoner guilty of murder, and Steamboat Springs Canal Company, are very while the other five, not having been instructed as to the law on the point not unnaturally, probably, were only too glad to have an opportunity of escaping from an unpleasant task. The prisoner's own statement was that the doceased drew the knife and he (the prisoner) succeeded in wresting it from him. Apart, however, from the almost absolute impossibility of a man unaided taking such a weapon from another, without, at all events, himself receiving very severe wounds in doing so, there was the evidence of the widow that no such weapon was ever in her husband's possession. It'is true that no one saw it in

It seems rather a long stretch of charity to assume that a man should have about him By Appointment to His Excellency the Go. by accident a weapon whose only use is to wound and kill. Moreover, what becomes of the doctrine laid down by Roscoe, that the use of a weapon calculated to cause death must be taken as evidence of malice? His Lardship said "He thought the jury had taken a very merciful, but at the same time a very just, view of the case." The exercise of mercy, British steamer Gordon Castle now lying in harhowever, is not a prerogative of the jury, but of the judge, or, in cases of murder, of the supreme authority. LTHOUGH the modern Materia Medica includes many valuable remedies for human afflictions, it is a matter of certainty that in all cases where the animal vitality is failing, Phosphorus is decidedly experior to every other remedy at present known. It will work effects such as nothing else will produce, and it possesses the great advantage of not causing, when its use is relinquished, the slightest reaction or depression.

CAUTION.—Prosphorus is sometimes sold in the form of Pills and Lozenges; it should be generally known that every form where solid particles of Phosphorns are in combination is dangerous. It is therefore necessary that the public should be cautioned against the use of any form of Phosphorus not perfeetly schuble in water.
